

When reporting datasets based on speleothem archives (physical sample), for new datasets, should the type of measurements available be considered essential, recommended or desired?

