When reporting datasets based on cross archives, for new compilations, should the compilation change log be considered essential, recommended or desired?