When reporting datasets based on speleothem archives (modern cave conditions), for new datasets, should the rock overburden thickness be considered essential, recommended or desired?