When reporting datasets based on lake sediments archives (particle size), for new datasets, should the pretreatment methods be considered essential, recommended or desired?