When reporting datasets based on trees archives, for new datasets, should the soil depth be considered essential, recommended or desired?