When reporting datasets based on lake sediments archives (particle size), for new datasets, should the summary statistics used to characterize distribution be considered essential, recommended or desired?