When reporting datasets based on speleothem archives (modern cave conditions), for new datasets, should the vegetation type be considered essential, recommended or desired?