When reporting datasets based on lake sediments archives (multiple cores), for new datasets, should the thickness be considered essential, recommended or desired?