When reporting datasets based on trees archives, for legacy datasets, should the number of unmeasured outer rings be considered essential, recommended or desired?